WHO'S BEHIND THIS MADNESS?

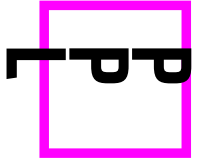

You've known our work for years. They Eat Culture are an experienced studio of creatives, artists, thinkers, activists, commentators, researchers, community facilitators, technologists, makers & extraordinary people-next-door to present, commission & produce creatively diverse & artistically ambitious live, performative, built, digital & mixed reality projects of use & value, co-designed with communities.

You'll know us for our arts & culture takeover of Preston's Continental pub in 2008 which turned it into the hippest venue in the city with arts activity spilling out of its door, year-round. You'll know we helped produce the Vintage Guild 2012, have taken over the Bus Station, Train Station, & Market on many occasions, turned the street into a 1715 performance battleground & local authority offices into sci-fi film squats. We work with national funder and commissioners everywhere. We make ambitious happenings on your doorstep, with you.

Our Big Lottery funded project Mobile Home sees us working in 5 areas across Preston between 2016&2019, where we're working with communities to develop new environmental, architectural & cultural activity. The People's Production Lab will tour around as part of Mobile Home and, like a snowball, get people making in all corners of Preston & South Ribble.

/// Collaborate as a partner / co-programmer: We work with partners from digital & creative to festivals to health to museums to education to engineering to charities, and all points in between. If your interests touch on what is happening here around creative experimentation & social good, speak to ruth@theyeatculture.org and we can make something happen.

/// Support as a sponsor: We're looking for sponsors to support us, with equipment, materials, resources, time, and of course cold hard cash. Get in touch with natalie@theyeatculture.org and we'll discuss how we can work together.

/// Supply us as a seller: food & drink or design/product based, & want to take some space at our weekends? Email celine@theyeatculture.org to start a dialogue and find out more about our opportunities

/// Join as a resident: Do you have some sort of creative, fabrication, technical, production activity at the centre of your work? We're looking for people from carpenters to coders, portraitists to printers, writers and welders to get involved with what we do.

Contact sally@theyeatculture.org to join our info & opportunity list

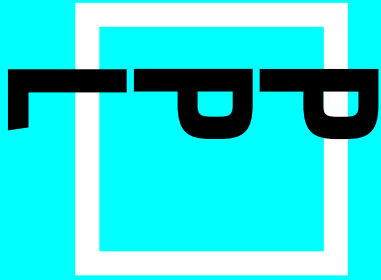

/// Help activate as a volunteer: We need you to get involved and develop your skills, from events production to environmental action to architectural wood work. Talk to jack@theyeatculture.org

/// Spread the word as a press partner: Need further information and want to tell our story? Get in touch with robyn@theyeatculture.org for a press pack, to set up interviews & to join our press list

/// Come along as a punter: keep your eye on social media through They Eat Culture, help spread the word, and support the work as often as you can. Check us out at www.theppl.co.uk & sign up for our mailing list ppl@theyeatculture.org
